The exquisite rooms are just the beginning when it comes to the Ritz-Carlton's latest hotel. The food enters a new level with all culinary venues and in-room dining led by Michelin-starred chef José Andrés. The ground floor restaurant, Zaytinya, features Turkish, Greek, and Lebanese-inspired cuisine with an innovative menu and creative cocktails. The hotel's rooftop restaurant steps onto New York's exciting nightlife scene offering sweeping 270-degree views of the city complemented by an expansive menu of cocktails, light bites, and an array of Tablas where guests can build boards of jamon, queso, and embutidos hailing from Spain. This unique space acts as a real-life jewel box with interiors representing that of a glamorous New York from decades past. This hotel also features several additional dining options including The Lobby Lounge and Bar and The Bazaar which is a high-end avant-garde dining destination that plays off of Andrés' Spanish roots creating a wild sensory adventure of sophisticated cuisine, artful service, and playful theatrics.
